

CHISWICK BUSINESS PARK

1999-2009, London, United Kingdom

Chiswick Park is a public garden within a major new office development near central London. The approach to the landscape was to provide two clearly defined spaces: the 'inner garden' and the 'outer landscape'. The 'inner garden' is designed as an elevated space at the centre of the site onto which the buildings front. In contrast, the 'outer landscape' is a simple and functional design that includes site boundaries, peripheral car parking and arterial corridors between the buildings.
